April Membership Meeting April 27, 2022

"It Takes a Family" -Lindsay Locasto

Lindsay Locasto is one of the co-founding members of the organization 7 Sisters. In August 2017, seven sisters joined together with one commonality. Each Sister had lost a sibling to the fate of opioids. 7 Sisters was promptly formed with one critical mission: to stop the stigma and bring awareness. Each sister agreed that while their mission overall was to educate the community, that if one life was saved then their goal was accomplished.

Deadline for registration is April 22nd.

History Month. For my family, March brought travel to the mountains, the culmination of winter sports, and many spring parties. One thing we didn't recognize as a family, is Women's History Month. Feels like a miss. As the mother of two boys, I won't get the opportunity to raise strong women within the confines of my nuclear family. But, I take seriously my role in raising my children in a household without pink or blue guardrails, and focused on opportunity and celebration.

I'm struck with appreciation for some of the activities we do together as a family, and the more inclusive approach to play and community. Together, we spend a lot of time in scouts, hockey and ballet. All three activities allow my boys to participate in co-ed settings. When I was growing up, scouting was either for boys or girls. I knew no girls who played hockey, and there were no boys in my ballet classes. But today, when we go to the rink, rehearsal, or a primitive campsite, I see kids playing and performing together without care. Intellectually, I know men are major players in dance and I've cheered (loudly) for the USA Women's Hockey team. Yet, seeing kids represented locally helps me believe we are making strides with a generation who can see beyond traditional roles and write a new story. I want to always celebrate women's impact on history, but I look forward to a time when our histories are intertwined. Less division along gender lines, and more integration across shared experiences of dancers, skaters, outdoor adventurers and artists.

At ANEW, I'm proud of the work we're doing to break down similar pink or blue barriers, and helping to crack those glass ceilings one relevé or slap shot at a time. Because when we can play in the arenas that bring us joy and allow us to express our full selves, we all celebrate together.

Cheers,
Claire Bosma
